

Press Release
November 23rd 2011

Awards Hat Trick for Causeway

Causeway has won no fewer than three awards in the 2011 Construction Computing Awards – Company of the Year, E-Commerce Product of the Year for the third year running and Superbrand of the Year. Causeway’s Telematics integrated vehicle tracking solution was also a finalist in the Mobile Product of the Year category.

Causeway CEO Phil Brown commented: “These results are a tribute to our ongoing commitment to delivering innovative solutions that add real value to our customers’ businesses. The fact that our Tradex eTrading solution has now won the E-Commerce category for the last three years is especially pleasing as Tradex delivers significant cost savings in supply chain management at a time when the industry needs to work smarter and reduce its overheads.”

The Construction Computing Awards showcase the industry’s leading software providers and solutions, and the winners are decided by the readers of Construction Computing, customers of nominees and other construction professionals.

The Company of the Year category is the very highest honour in the awards and reflects Causeway’s exceptional performance in all areas of operations, from innovation through to delivery and support – nationally and internationally.

The ‘hat trick’ for Tradex follows a year of hugely successful rollouts, including Carillion, Lend Lease and McNicholas. Tradex is an electronic document exchange service that eliminates the need to print, handle and re-key paper trading documents.

Superbrand of the Year was a new category that recognises the innovative use of a range of media within marketing, as well as a commitment to brand messaging and values.

Ends

About Causeway

From feasibility, through construction, to facilities management, Causeway’s software powers the complete life cycle of the built environment. Whatever the size of business, Causeway is dedicated to providing innovative software solutions to help win more profitable work, manage cost and reduce risk. As the leading supplier of software to the built environment, Causeway is unique in providing end-to-end solutions, guaranteed to support environmental performance.