Next generation Cibes residential lift offers a unique experience

Cibes has introduced an innovative residential lift where form and function work together to offer the user a unique experience.

The design of vertical platform lifts has remained virtually unchanged for decades until the Cibes Lift Group decided that it was time for a change. Residential lift Cibes Air® is a new fresh take on a classic lift concept and product designers Gustav Berg and Ida Eriksson are the creative minds behind the innovative design.

One of the main features is an elegant LED lit handrail with integrated destination buttons which makes hold-to-run operation feel much more natural, as Gustav Berg explains: "One of our main challenges was to make the hold-to-run platform controls easier and more intuitive to use. With the Cibes Air, you just lean your hand on the handrail to travel, and release pressure to stop."

Another challenge was to make some of the essential safety functions of the lift look more elegant and discreet. The result is a unique design, created exclusively for the Cibes Air.

Ida Eriksson explains: "On most other platform lifts, the design of the emergency stop and lift alarm buttons is very industrial-looking. For the Cibes Air, we wanted to create something more sophisticated, and the result is both user-friendly and beautiful."

Residential lift Cibes Air combines Scandinavian functionalistic elegance and the beauty of natural materials to create a unique and timeless expression. The elegant, floating impression of the back lit front panel and handrail has given the lift model its name.

Available in three different design concepts; wood, textile and metal; the Cibes Air offers you great freedom to compose a lift design which blends in seamlessly with your home and lifestyle.
