Flexseal secures future with flurry of new starters

Six new members of staff have begun work at market-leading coupling manufacturer Flexseal during the summer months.

Their new jobs cover the whole spectrum of roles within the company, ranging from sales, HR and IT to Health & Safety and New Product Development. Many of the roles will involve working both for Flexseal and for its sister company Source One Environmental.

“We’re excited to welcome a talented group of new employees to the Flexseal team,” commented company secretary, Andrew Williams. “We know that having the right people is what drives the business forward and these new faces bring a wealth of valuable skills into the company.”

Flexseal was established in the UK in 1988 with just two employees. Following several moves due to expansion and the purchase of the company by the US-based Fernco Group, the business boasts over 70 employees and is the market leader in its field.

“The new roles within the company have been established to support our plans to keep growing into new markets and with new products,” added Williams. “Our new staff are a sign of the exciting times that lie ahead for Flexseal.”
