New Honeywell Web Site Provides a Wealth of Advice

Honeywell has relaunched its popular UK Heating Controls web site with a fresh new design.

With very clear and easy access to a wealth of advice on products and systems to save energy, enhance comfort and satisfy Building Regulations, the web site provides a comprehensive resource for all who use, install, maintain, design and specify heating systems. The address is www.honeywelluk.com

Honeywell is the leading UK supplier of domestic heating and combustion controls. The new web site design makes it easy to find details of products and systems from the company's huge range, which includes wired and wireless thermostats, wireless enabled timers and programmers, control valves and water controls.

The site's new "News & Events" tab includes Honeywell product news and presences at exhibitions. A download tab accesses the full range of product brochures and specifications sheets, user guides and installation instructions.

A "Support Services" tab has access to information on such topics as Building Regulations, technical services and training courses. FAQ sheets provide advice on controls for all domestic heating and hot water applications, with radiator and underfloor systems.
