Kent Blaxill Future is Clear and Fast

Orders for glass at Kent Blaxill get a speedy turnaround following the installation of a state-of-the-art automatic glass cutting machine.

The Bottero automatic cutting bench has made a big difference at the company's glass centre at Colchester, Essex.

Adam Smith, glass department manager, said: "It is up to five times quicker than our previous glass cutting machine. I have been amazed by the advance of technology in these machines over recent years."

The machine cuts glass between 3mm and 19mm thick and can be used to produce either standard programmed sizes or customised shapes which can be digitised from a template by laser. Templates can be downloaded direct from a computer network. It also features a safety beam, which if broken results in the machine cutting out.

John Ford, operations director, said: "We have continued to invest throughout the recession to ensure that we are well placed when the market picks up."
