Seeing Clearly Thanks to New Orbis Range

Featuring a sleek, minimalist appearance, the new Orbis single glazed partitioning system from Komfort is ideal for projects where standard performance is the prerequisite.

Developed in response to increasing demand for affordable, fit for purpose glazed partitioning, the Orbis system retains all the quality expected from Komfort and is ideally suited for everyday projects where a quick turnaround is required. Set offerings, including three glass doors and four veneered doors, create a comprehensive portfolio of options within the range, delivering flexibility for customers in the choice of glass size and trim colour.

Although economical, the Orbis system is not without dedicated features. For example, the crystal clear dry joint, which contributes to the minimalist look by creating a seamless joint between the sections of glass. Used instead of traditional silicone, the PETg joint has four options: a straight glass-to-glass junction, 90°C corner junction, 135°C corner junction, and a 3-way junction. Another is the new floor mounted self-closing pivot option on the Frameless Glass Door, which eliminates the need to fit a coffer box and floor spring resulting in a faster installation. A range of ironmongery, compliant with Part M requirements, is also available.

Franz Lorenschitz, Marketing and New Product Development Manager at Komfort, said: "The launch of our Orbis range demonstrates that stylish and modern office spaces can be created economically, making refurbishment of office spaces with affordable quality glazed partitioning systems a reality. We have carefully chosen all of the elements within the Orbis range to create a full complement of aesthetically pleasing glazing, door and ironmongery options, all of which meet the relevant parts of the Building Regulations."
