Metrotile becomes member of MPBA

Metrotile is now a proud member of The Modular & Portable Building Association (MPBA) – the voice of the modular industry in the UK for 80 years.

The company is keen to provide industry leading roofing systems and service to MPBA members.

Metrotile, the UK's leading supplier of lightweight granular coated metal roof tiles, provides estimating and specification services along with installation training free of charge.

The tiles are pressed from steel at Metrotile's manufacturing facility and the system is just a fraction - one seventh - of the weight of traditional roof materials such as slate or clay.

These factors make Metrotile ideal for modular and off-site fabricated buildings as it offers superior rooftop protection, with minimum stress directed to the structure of the building – something that is absolutely essential for when modular buildings are transported from factory to the site of installation. As a result of these benefits, Metrotile has already found favour with modular builders and offsite construction companies throughout the UK.

By joining the highly-reputable MPBA, Metrotile demonstrates a continued commitment to the modular building industry, boosting the credence to its product line within the sector while adding an increased level of confidence for specifiers within the modular and offsite building sector.
