Plymovent Supports Lung Cancer Awareness

This November, Plymovent, a global leader in workplace clean air solutions, is proud to support Lung Cancer Awareness Month by sponsoring the American Lung Association (USA), the European Lung Foundation (ELF), and the Thoracic Society of Thailand. This initiative highlights Plymovent's dedication to lung health through awareness, prevention, and education.

Lung cancer is one of the most prevalent and deadliest cancers worldwide. While smoking remains the primary cause, exposure to air pollution, hazardous chemicals, and second-hand smoke are also significant contributors. Raising awareness and encouraging early detection are crucial steps in reducing its impact.

Supporting Global Lung Health Organizations

Through its partnerships, Plymovent actively contributes to the efforts of these organizations to educate and empower communities:

- American Lung Association (USA) offers resources for lung cancer screening, treatment, and patient support.
- European Lung Foundation (ELF) raises awareness across Europe about the effects of air quality and environmental factors on lung health.
- Thoracic Society of Thailand focuses on improving respiratory health in Southeast Asia, where air pollution is a growing concern.

Protecting Workers and Advancing Lung Health

As an expert in air filtration, Plymovent provides innovative solutions that minimize exposure to hazardous fumes, vehicle exhaust, and oil mist in the workplace. These efforts create cleaner, safer environments, reducing the risk of lung diseases, including lung cancer.

Beyond its products, Plymovent also prioritizes the well-being of its employees by implementing global health initiatives tailored to local needs. These initiatives range from health screenings and fitness programs to educational workshops on lung health. "Plymovent's core mission is to protect workers against polluted air in their workplaces, ensuring they breathe healthy air," said Friso Horstmeier, CEO of Plymovent. "Through our sponsorships, we aim to raise awareness about the importance of lung health for everyone, including our own employees."
