The Sash Window Workshop bespoke products match original period designs

The Sash Window Workshop is experienced in working with a variety of different architects, contractors and developers and it was a contracting company that approached the team regarding a large project in London.

The company, which has been replacing and renovating timber windows and doors for various properties across London and the South for 25 years, was approached by an interior contracting company which was looking to replace the timber windows and doors for a property in South West London.

The company requested new windows and doors which fitted the following specification:

- New traditional windows to match the existing style and be period appropriate.
- The highest possible thermal and acoustic performance.
- The maximum amount of light transmission possible through the glass.
- Bespoke window ironmongery.
- Painted internally to meet the customer's specific paint colour requirements.

Upon receiving the request for a quotation, one of the team's trained surveyors met with the architect for the project to discuss their requirements. In total more than 20 new sash and casement timber windows and 4 new doors were needed.

As all of the new windows and doors manufactured by The Sash Window Workshop are bespoke, the company was able to ensure that their replacement windows and doors exactly matched the original designs, meaning that they fitted in with the surrounding properties and retained the aesthetic look and feel of the property.

Due to the location of the property, all the new windows had to be carried up through the property by experienced installers to be fitted.

Both the customer and contractors were very happy with the work carried out by The Sash Window Workshop, which helped transform the property into a beautiful home.

As a FENSA registered company, the customer received a FENSA certificate for the complete new windows, increasing the value of the property and certifying that the work by The Sash Window Workshop complies with building regulations.
