The Sash Window Workshop chosen to aid transformation of former warehouse

The owner of a former late Victorian warehouse that was being transformed into a welcoming family home chose The Sash Window Workshop to carry out works to the windows and doors.

The property had fallen into disrepair and required major renovation. Rotten windows and doors all required replacement. The replacement windows and doors needed to be double glazed and to comply with the conservation area requirements.

When looking for the right company to carry out the work, Mr S. invited five different companies to visit the property to go through the requirements. After assessing each of the different quotations and companies, Mr S. decided to go ahead with the quotation provided by The Sash Window Workshop.

With the renovation of the whole property being carried out simultaneously, the window suppliers were required to work alongside a variety of other trades when completing the work. In total 10 new sash and casement windows and five new doors were installed within the property over three weeks.

"It was really important to me that I could find a company that shared my need for quality and cost but also help me avoid any mistakes that could occur from me not having done this before," comments Mr S. "From the start it was clear that The Sash Window Workshop cared as much as I did."

Since installing the new windows and doors, Mr S. commented that neighbours have "specifically knocked to tell us how much the windows have improved the look of the street."
