Style Launches New Technical Drawings Library Content

Style has introduced a new section to its website containing a technical drawings library.

Enabling architects to download Style's range of moveable partitioning walls in DWG or PDF format is a significant enhancement to Style's online service, and has been introduced to support the fast-growing number of specifications it is receiving.

As sole UK distributor for DORMA, Skyfold and SWG, Style offers a broad range of operable walls, from practical low cost solutions through to high end systems popular with many major city corporates.

Architects and specifiers wishing to use the service should visit the new "Architects Area" on the website accessed via the tab at the top of the screen.

"Our technical section has taken significant time and investment to develop," said Julian Sargent, Style's group managing director.

"However, it is something we have been asked for by our customers, and we pride ourselves in responding to their feedback. It also provides an invaluable service to any architect seeking a moveable partitioning wall, irrespective of how large or small the project is.

"Style prides itself on the breadth of its products and installations, which range from simple folding walls for community centres and schools, through to vertically rising, fully automatic acoustic systems in the boardrooms of global brands such as PwC and the Royal Bank of Canada," continued Julian. "We also installed the largest ever moveable wall in Europe at the ExCel exhibition centre, which won us our most recent AIS Contractors Gold award."

Style has also now signed an agreement with RIBA, and during the coming weeks Style's products will be included within NBS+ as well as www.product-selector.com to further enhance its aim to make details readily available to architects and specifiers.

The architects' area is simple to use, and available to all, and for support and assistance with your next project, please contact your nearest Style office.
